CHRISTIAN EDUCATION IN MISSOURI.

New York Evangelist (1830-1902); Jun 12, 1884; 55, 24; American Periodicals Series Online pg. 4

A gentle breeze of charity, love, and kindness breathes through the pages of this issue of the New York Evangelist, offering a refreshing respite from the tumultuous events of the day. Among the topics covered are Christian education in Missouri, as well as a heartfelt reflection on the importance of education in shaping the future of the country. The editor, Mr. Allen, underscores the value of education not only in academic pursuits but also in fostering a spirit of community and compassion. The article concludes with a call to action, urging readers to support the cause of Christian education and to be agents of change in their own communities.

The issue also includes a series of letters from readers, each providing a unique perspective on the importance of education. One reader expresses their gratitude for the opportunity to learn and grow, while another highlights the role of education in preparing youth for the challenges of the world. The letters are a testament to the enduring power of education, as they continue to inspire and motivate generations of learners.

In summary, the New York Evangelist issue of June 12, 1884, offers a glimpse into the rich tapestry of early 20th-century American life, with its focus on the transformative power of education. Through its pages, we are reminded of the enduring relevance of these themes, and the continued importance of supporting the education of future generations.
is daily fed at those tables filling that large hall, is a happy family. It should not be imagined that they are starved; but certainly they are not familiar with luxury. It is only because they are bent on the noble purpose to become well educated men and women, that they eat their plain food, and wear their plain clothes, and live in their plain rooms, and coöperate in the organized industry and careful frugality of Park College Family, with cheerful and thankful hearts.

I know of no educational enterprise to which money may be contributed with less probability of waste, or greater assurance of usefulness.
